Transportation and more

Greetings!

As you may recall, the House version of the budget funded an additional $50,000 for Assistive Technologies, but did not add the $1,100,000 to Independent Living that we requested. Right now, we are waiting to hear what the Senate does with the budget. The Senate version will be released May 16, and we will know then if we were successful.

This newsletter lists several opportunities to attend forums and fundraisers, and to participate in universal design. And we're also bringing you up to date on Transportation. Enjoy!

Model Employer Update

Are there jobs for people with disabilities in state government?

You're invited to join a discussion on what state government is doing to meet its goal of becoming a model employer for people with disabilities.

Three years ago Governor Patrick proclaimed that the state should be a Model Employer of people with disabilities. The initiative has included successful efforts to promote accommodations, provide training and help people with disabilities remain in the work force.

Has the meter moved on the number of people with disabilities being hired? What affirmative steps are being made to recruit job candidates with disabilities? Is the Model Employer initiative working?

Disability Advocates requested a meeting with state officials to hear an update on what has happened so far and what the future plans are to ensure that people with disabilities are getting jobs in state government.

Two Opportunities to Participate in Universal Design

Boston Society of Architects - Almost and Fully Accessibility Project for the November ABX Conference

The BSA (Boston Society of Architects) is planning to build a 600 sq. ft. 'almost accessible' and 'fully accessible' structure at its annual conference (ABX) this November. This structure will be a prominent element in the Exhibit Hall (on the main aisle). They will offer people (1,000's attend!) to move through this structure in a wheelchair, scooter, walker, etc. and experience some of the common issues on the 'almost accessible' part and the difference that 'fully accessible' elements can make. They hope to have the MIT Age Lab join this effort and provide its age simulation suits for people to use too. The idea is to help architects understand WHY the inches of minimum design standards matter, and why meeting/exceeding them is important for many people.

They would like to have people with disabilities involved in designing and hosting this exhibit.

While the first design meeting was missed, we're hoping they continue to be interested in participation.

New User / Expert Lab at Institute for Human Centered Design

With a strong interest in inclusive technology and product design, the Institute for Human Centered Design (IHCD) is creating a new User/Expert Lab in the Boston headquarters and is recruiting users and experts to be part of a participant database for design research projects.

A user/expert can be anyone who has developed natural experience in dealing with the challenges of our physical, information, communication or policy environment. Specifically we are looking

If you appreciate MWCIL and the support it provides you, please consider a gift of any amount. By showing your appreciation and giving back, MWCIL can provide more services for the community. We thank you! Go to MWCIL Webpage or click on the Donate button.

All online gifts are tax deductible. We couldn't carry out our important mission without you!

Got Computers?

Do you have computer parts sitting around unused? How about your employer or relative? Let MWCIL's Computer Recycling Program take them off your hands!

Donated computers are refurbished at MWCIL and given free to qualified consumers. All donated equipment must be three years old or newer, and in working condition, providing a charitable tax donation to the donor. Refurbished computers are given to consumers who have passed the Center's basic computer course, enabling them to better access resources necessary for independent living.

MWCIL is a licensed Microsoft reseller of operating systems, so each donated computer's hard drive is completely erased according to industry standards. MWCIL installs a new for candidates with a variety of physical, sensory and brain-based functional limitations including the incremental systemic changes of aging.

Participants will help to review the usability and accessibility of anything from physical environments to products, services and new technologies. Many different techniques will be used as each project is different. Some projects may take just one hour while others may involve participation over a longer period of time, cash stipends will be based on the type and length of a project. There is no need to have previous experience.

The Lab will have a physical space at IHCD headquarters in downtown Boston but some research may be done on location. We would work to coordinate timing with your availability. Issues with the MBTA

As we've reported before, the MBTA has been studying, proposing and planning changes, particularly for people with disabilities.

Information and justifications for the changes have been vague. The disability community has tried to stay involved, to help decision makers understand the impact of changes, and to help solve problems, but from what we can decipher, we have had little or no impact on decisions affecting the disability community.

As John Winske outlines in his DPC newsletter editorial, there are several fronts. "We have been hit with a 100 percent increase in RIDE fares, implementation of a premium service area and now the probable implementation of an in-person assessment requirement." On top of that, the governor tasked a commission to "find solutions to stem the rise in paratransit costs, to look at issues such as better service coordination and changes, and to discover potentially innovative ways to meet these goals."

Fare Increases:

The fare increases have been described as a done deal, with the standard RIDE increasing 100%, and the new complication of a Premium Service area. The ADA territory fee will double from $2/ride to $4/ride, and if you're in a Premium Service Area, $5/ride will be charged. (Other fares also are increasing - a single ride fare is going up from $1.25 to $1.50, but if you're a senior, the single fare is jumping from $0.40 to $0.75 - almost double.)

The Premium Service Area is defined as when the origin and/or destination is greater than 3/4 miles from or outside of operating hours for MBTA bus or subway, or for same-day trip requests. The distance - 3/4 mile - is tough enough to understand: Is it 3/4 mile from the bus route or from the bus stop? From the curb of the route, or from the yellow center line? Is it to your driveway, is it to your door? Is it to the sidewalk? How do you find out which? Is it as the crow flies or as the driver drives? If you can get to your neighbor's house which is closer to the bus route, can you get the regular fee? But totally mind-boggling is the "outside of operating hours for MBTA bus or subway" piece that will change your address into an intermittent Premium Service Area. Don't worry, when you call to reserve your ride, they will tell you how much it will be... I doubt they will be able to tell you why, though!

Visit the Fare and Service Changes: MBTA Staff Recommendation page for more details. What we don't see on this page is any testimony from the public forums. There is one report called Preliminary Public Comment Analysis, but it's all charts with no actual comments. They received 163 emails, 30 general public letters and 6 elected and organizational letters about the RIDE... and ??? What did they say? Apparently the MBTA heard nothing.

In-Person Assessment Requirement:

Next is the "probable implementation of an in-person assessment requirement." Again, this change to the process appears to have had very little input from people with disabilities. And much of the information is vague - a certification is said to last 3 years, but "generally, after the initial term of eligibility is up customers will not have to return for another in-person assessment." Vague. They don't hesitate to ask people with disabilities "to give up a few hours of one's day to participate in an assessment", but it's considered "extremely costly for the assessors to make individual trips to every applicant's home." Read the webpage - they expect 95% to continue to be eligible. Where are the savings? It's hard to believe that adding in a whole new expensive process will save even one dollar.

Governor Patrick's 530 Commission:

Many organizations put a lot of effort into developing testimony for the 530 Commission "including two DPC members, Jini Fairley and Denise Karuth. It was tasked by the Governor to find solutions to stem the rise in paratransit costs, to look at issues such as better service coordination and changes, and to discover potentially innovative ways to meet these goals. We acted in good faith by participating in the dialogue, believing this process would yield substantive changes which would be implemented statewide...We have not heard yet from the 530 commission, so there has been no time to implement their ideas to see if systemic changes could be made. What happened to all the good ideas we and others suggested? " The commission was supposed to release their report in January, 2012.

Read John Winske's full editorial at the DPC website. Everything above in quotes is from his article.

Federal Developmental Disability Report

The National Council on Disability has released a new report called:

Exploring New Paradigms for the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act, as a supplement to the 2011 NCD publication Rising Expectations: The Developmental Disabilities Act Revisited. The supplement expands on the challenges identified in Rising Expectations and offers specific recommendations for aligning systems and statutes both within and beyond the scope of the DD Act.

"The Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act , signed into law in 1963 and reauthorized most recently in 2000, is the nation's policy and civil rights framework for more than 4.7 million Americans with intellectual and developmental disabilities. When the law was passed in 1963, Congress established a set of principles and programs focused on improving the lives of people with ID/DD; protecting their civil and human rights; and promoting their maximum potential through increased independence, productivity, and integration into the community. Today, these goals must be revitalized and translated into a coordinated federal strategy focused on supporting citizens with ID/DD in achieving optimal self-sufficiency, economic advancement, and full participation in the community."

Thanks to Dan Shannon, Executive Director at MA Developmental Disabilities Council for the information.
