

News from MWCIL - November 2017

Nationwide, the first ever women and people of color were elected as mayors, governors and state legislators. The disability fight for civil rights is not that different from other diverse groups fighting for civil rights - we feel this trend will positively affect everyone.

In Framingham, the first mayor ever is an African American woman and we wish her well on this historic task. (Read about the election in the MetroWest Daily News.)

Meanwhile, we have had success with the Alternative Housing Voucher Program. The state House and Senate overrode the governor's veto and restored a $400,000 increase in funding, which is now at $5 million. We thank our MetroWest Senators Jamie Eldridge and Karen Spilka for their support for AHVP.

Have a happy Thanksgiving!

Executive Director

Affordable Care Act Open Enrollment

The Affordable Signup deadline is December 15, 2017. The online applications for enrollment are at HealthCare.gov. The website will be down for maintenance for 12 hours every Sunday except for December 10. Our advice is to apply early!

Issue of the Month: CVS Opening Mock Stores to Train People with Disabilities

Please read the story below. We do not know many details of CVS's plan, and cannot jump to conclusions. Naturally that doesn't stop us from thinking about the ways that good intentions can go awry. We will publish your comments in our next newsletter!

CVS Opening Mock Stores to Train People with Disabilities

CVS plans to open at least 8 mock stores to be used for classroom and hands-on training for prospective employees with disabilities. Once the program has been completed, students are eligible to apply for employment.

"...The first site opened in Virginia in 2016 and the company said 41 people have completed the training program and 11 are now on the CVS payroll..."

Read the whole story at The Disability Scoop

After MWCIL shared this story on Facebook, Blue Water Center for Independent Living (Port Huron, Michigan) posted this compelling comment:

"Interested in hearing different opinions. Personally I think ALL people should be trained in a regular store or ALL people should be trained in a mock store. Typically a person is hired and then trained so why are those with disabilities required to prove themselves first? However, I am glad to see CVS is trying, unlike many other retailers who will not even consider hiring employees with a disability."

MWCIL appreciates the large investment by CVS into increasing employment opportunities for people with disabilities. As we have learned with Special Education and other supports, people with disabilities sometimes need a different path to achieve an equal outcome. Perhaps "sometimes" is the operative word? I.e. we hope that CVS is hiring some people with disabilities without completing the training first, depending on their level of skills and experience. Is the training designed for specific disabilities? Is this extra step in pursuing employment fair?

Opioid Crisis in the USA: a Public Health Emergency

The Disability Policy Consortium has issued a Call To Action - Substance Abuse and People with Disabilities in Massachusetts. Please read their issue brief in MS Word or as a PDF.

From The Lancet, November 4

The Lancet's editorial on the US opioid crisis analyzes President Trump's recent declaration of a nationwide public health emergency. His response addressed the supply and demand, but did not describe addiction as an illness. In spite of the estimated 53,000 opioid overdose deaths in 2016, no additional federal funds were recommended, and in fact funding has been threatened by budget and affordable care act proposals.

Massachusetts passed a law in 2016, and as of August, deaths were 5% over (but still too high) in 2017. Changes to prescription monitoring is credited with much of the improvement.

Communities in MA are providing their own supports. The Telegram.com article: How one Massachusetts town is facing the opioid crisis head-on reports on Plymouth. "One of the main things we have to fight is the stigma, because it keeps people from getting treatment," he said. "They feel ashamed. They feel embarrassed."

MetroWest has active groups. MetroWest Daily News reports on the Natick Opioid Task Force. Milford / Franklin have the SAFE Coalition which has helped and educated many people.

Architectural Access Board Bill S. 1379 and H.2498

Please continue to contact your state legislators and ask them to support the AAB bill. This bill is not a budget item, and will cost the state no money! Yet the bill will greatly increase the number of accessible housing units and accessible jobs. In our minds, it's a no-brainer. The bills were recently heard in committee, but we still need you to call your representatives and senators!

The guide also offers many resources and ideas on how to advance the discussion and how to educate others. We highly recommend this toolkit and resource guide for anyone who wants to be active in the fight for disability rights!
